Thursday, April 25, 2013 -- Afternoon Concurrent Sessions

Thursday, April 25 1:30 - 2:30 p.m.	Workshop Option 1	Workshop Option 2	Workshop Option 3	Workshop Option 4	Workshop Option 5
Location/ Room	Hilton Hotel Jackson Room	Hilton Hotel Sansome Room	Hilton Hotel Montgomery Room	Hilton Hotel Washington Room	CCSF Annex Room 304
Topic	The American Council on Education (ACE) Fellows Program: A Pathway to Leadership for Asian Pacific Americans	Asian American Epistemology: Building Wisdom through Experience in Teaching and Activism in Chicago	California Dream Act: Our Lives and Our Future	Weaving a Network of Support for Pacific Islander College Students: Recruiting Practices at the University of California Los Angeles	Soft Skills in Leadership: It's an Important Human Resource  Attendees are encouraged to submit resumes for review after conference.
Description	For several decades now, the ACE Fellows Program has sought to cultivate the next generation of academic administrators through establishing a pipeline of candidates who reflect the growing diversity of the academy, as well as of the nation more broadly. Current and former ACE Fellows, nominators, and mentors will lead discussion on the general aims and parameters of the Fellowship as a pathway to academic leadership for Asian Pacific Americans.	In August of 2012, the Chicago Teachers Union went on strike for the first time in 25 years to challenge mayoral control over Chicago Public Schools. This presentation highlights the experiences and stories of Asian American teachers and activists involved in the struggle for public education and offers implications for the roles of Asian Americans in higher education in support of the impacted communities.	California Dream Act will change many lives, enable us to tell different stories, and brighten Californians' future. In this workshop, the diverse Asian Pacific Islander's demographics, academic statistics, and educational needs of students in a community college district will be presented. Presenters with extensive experiences serving AB 540 students and a financial aid expert will provide an overview of the Act and facilitate a discussion on financial aid related questions.	Institutional approaches to recruiting underrepresented minority groups are often geared towards Latino, African-American, or Native/American Indian communities, with limited engagement to Asian Pacific Islander communities facing similar barriers to higher education. Often recruitment in Pacific Islander communities focuses on students with athletic prowess, ignoring those who may have academic inspirations. This session focuses on the UCLA's student and administrative efforts targeting Pacific Islanders resulting in the institution's heightened visibility in the community and a positive campus community environment. Pacific Islander staff at UCLA engaged in recruitment and former program participants will provide their insights and perspectives, and offer best practices.	Asian Americans are seen as highly competent and hard workers, but lacking social and leadership skills. These stereotypes and discrimination and racism are major factors that exclude APIs from leadership roles. In this session, API higher education Human Resources leaders will discuss how they broke through the "Bamboo Ceiling," how they deal with stereotypes and prejudice, and how being API has influenced their leadership style.

Presenters	Steven Yao, Ph.D., Professor, Hamilton College, and ACE Fellow	Kay Fujiyoshi, Ph.D. Candidate, University of Illinois-Chicago, Educational Policy Studies	May Kuangchi Chen, Ph.D. Vice President, Student Services, Berkeley City College	Natasha Saelua, Associate Director, UCLA Community Programs Office	Christine Ijima Hall, Ph.D., Special Consultant, Maricopa Community Colleges

Thursday, April 25 3:00 to 4:00 p.m.	Workshop Option 1	Workshop Option 2	Workshop Option 3	Workshop Option 4	Workshop Option 5
Topic	The Importance of Second-in-Commands: Views from UC Graduate Division Assistant Vice Provosts and Assistant Deans	Women in Student Affairs Administration: Unfolding the Future	Advancing Student Success among Asian Pacific Islanders and Their Peers	Lives, Stories and Oral Histories of Japanese Americans	Asian Pacific American Learning Communities: Creating a Statewide Presence in California

Description	Behind every successful president, vice provost, and dean is a strong right-hand person who often “runs the show” by demonstrating operational talent and legitimacy in a faculty-driven environment. The presenters will share stories about their career paths—from student affairs, to academic affairs, to graduate education—and their experiences as “Second-In-Commands” in graduate divisions within the University of California.	While more women enter the field of student affairs, there are very few studies in the literature that discuss the experiences of female student affairs professionals. Studies tend to ignore the experiences of women of color or to include women of color in their samples. Presenters will share stories and career paths in student affairs administration, including crossroads in their lives as well as challenges regarding the doctorate, mobility, balance, institutional fit, mentors, and family.	The Student Success Initiatives recommended by California Community Colleges Student Success Taskforce have begun to drastically change students’ lives. This presentation will provide an arena for the audience to exchange ideas with Berkeley City College leadership regarding strategies and best practices on how to reach out to high school counselors and students in an organized fashion; enable students to participate in one-stop placement assessment, orientation and development of an education plan; assist students in identifying a program of study early in their academic careers; and provide students the opportunity to consider attending full time.	Oral life histories of Japanese Americans will be the focus of this session. The presenter will share the stories, experiences, and histories garnered from over 500 interviews conducted over the past 30 years throughout the United States. Included will be methods, issues, results, and implications stemming from this broad and long-range project.	Facilitators will share their vision of launching an umbrella organization to bring together and support API learning communities across California: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>To establish API programs in communities of need</li> <li>To provide on-going professional development training to API program instructors and counselors</li> <li>To encourage collaboration and sharing of best practices when working with underprepared, first-generation API community college students</li> </ul> Together we will explore the benefits and challenges of creating a statewide organization of API learning communities across California community colleges, using statewide models such as Puente, a well-established statewide program with a 32-year history that serves a primarily Latino student population across 60 community college campuses in California, as well as Umoja Community, which actively promotes student success for all students, with an emphasis on African Americans, through culturally responsive curriculum and practices.
Presenters	Samuel Bersola, Ph.D., Assistant Vice Provost for Graduate Education, UCLA Rich Shintaku, Ph.D., Interim Associate Vice Chancellor for Student Affairs/ Assistant Dean, Graduate Division, University of California, Davis Callale Concon, Assistant Dean, Graduate Division, University of California, Merced	Julie Wong, Ph.D., Regional Associate Vice Chancellor for Student Affairs, University of South Florida St. Petersburg Mamta Accapadi, Ph.D., Dean of Students, Oregon State University Sunny Lee, Ombuds Office for Students &amp; Postdoctoral Appointees, University of California Berkeley	May Kuanchi Chen, Ph.D., Vice President, Student Services, Berkeley City College Debbie Budd, Ph.D., President, Berkeley City College Allene H. Young, Counseling/Department Chair, Berkeley City College Emie Mitsuno Hernandez, Counselor, Berkeley City College	Rita Takahashi, Ph.D., Professor, San Francisco State University, School of Social Work	Darlene Elasiague, College of Alameda Phoumy Sayavong, Ph.D., Laney College Grace Ebron, Puente Project, University of California, Office of the President Tom deWit, Umoja Community, Chabot College

Thursday, April 25 4:15 to 5:15 p.m.	Workshop Option 1	Workshop Option 2	Workshop Option 3	Workshop Option 4	Workshop Option 5
Location/ Room	Hilton Hotel Jackson Room	Hilton Hotel Sansome Room	Hilton Hotel Montgomery Room	Hilton Hotel Washington Room	CCSF Annex Room 304
Topic	The Road to Thought Leadership	California State University Asian Pacific Islander Initiative to Support Underserved Students	Affirmative Reactions: Attending to the Physical and Mental Health of AAPI Students	The Changing Asian Pacific Settlements in the Bay Area: Census 2010 Update	Student Service Operation for Success: AAPI Students' Experience and U-Story
	"The Road to Thought Leadership" features Van Ton-Quinlivan, a recognized thought leader in workforce development. She is joined by Denise Brosseau, whose upcoming book Ready to be a Thought Leader?, discusses the framework for those who aspire to thought leadership. Van will share her distilled best practices learned during her journey from leader to thought leader. We will tie this into a general framework for those who aspire to be thought leaders in their organizations or communities and share the stories of other leaders who have made a similar journey. There will also be a Q&amp;A session at the end.	This presentation will showcase the California State University (CSU) Asian American Pacific Islander (AAPI) Initiative as a national model for effective partnerships to raise college awareness and preparation among AAPI students and families. Presenters will discuss the unique challenges that AAPI students face; effective outreach strategies for recruiting underrepresented AAPI students; and approaches for educating families about how to support AAPI students' college-going efforts.	The presence and significant contributions of diverse Asian American and Pacific Islander (AAPI) communities in higher education is undeniable. AAPI history is multilayered and complex. A more holistic perspective that is relevant and that pays attention to the physical and mental health of AAPI students in higher education fosters the success of AAPI college students. Presenters will share perspectives on the persistence of stereotypes and the continuing needs of students particularly AAPI mental health.	Of the 140,000 or so Asian immigrants who came to California annually, around 40,000 settled in the Bay Area. This presentation examines the impact of immigration in the past decade that fueled the Asian Pacific demographic shift in the Bay Area. Census 2010 and immigration data are used to explore the bi-polar development between traditional inner-city Asian enclaves and suburban settlements in the Bay Area.	Presenters will discuss how the Student Service Operation for Success (SSOS-AANAPISI) Program at California State University East Bay guides Asian American and Pacific Islander students on a path to success in college and in their future careers. SSOS presenters will discuss the unique student features of the SSOS and provide their "U-Story" as they reflect upon their ethnic-cultural origin and identity.

Topic	Implications of the National Agenda for Policy and Practice	Claiming Our Own Space: Personal/ Political Stories Among Pin@y Scholar- Activists and Reflections on Returning Home	Getting to the Table: Cultivating Effective Practices to Influence Your Institution	Full Circle Project at California State University, Sacramento, and the Leadership Initiative	Engagement and Empowerment: Innovative Approaches for Strengthening Employee Leadership and Success
Description	Panelists will respond to the morning plenary session. Each panelist will present a 10-minute response, which may include comments on how ARC can collaborate with various constituencies to achieve mutual goals, followed by a 30-minute Q&A and discussion of collaboration.	There is a poverty of imagination and vision, of dreaming and well-being in today's educational climate. How do we appreciate the potential of underserved students and the possibilities set forth by emerging scholars in the field of education? In this session, presenters will share the richness of personal/political stories among Pin@y scholar-activists through portraiture and self-reflective counter-narrative.	The "table" is a salient image and powerful metaphor referring to the place where critical decisions are made, priorities are established, and funding is determined. This session will provide an opportunity for participants to reflect on why the table is important, what happens at the table, and most importantly, how we can be a "difference maker" at and beyond the table?	A unique element of the Full Circle Project (FCP) is the close partnership with Sacramento State's Student Organizations and Leadership's Leadership Initiative (LI) and EOP's Summer Bridge Program. Presenters will discuss the success of the FCP/LI and its impact on students.	Learn how two four-year Universities with very different backgrounds addressed the issues of employee engagement and leadership. For CSU East Bay, under the direction of newly appointed President Leroy Morishita, it became apparent that investing in employee professional and personal development was a high priority. For the API staff and faculty at Loyola Marymount University, coming together to rebuild their own organization and successfully bringing together other ethnic and LGBTQ faculty/staff affinity groups was the key. In this co-presentation, we'll share our insights and discuss the challenges for creating community and empowering ourselves and others.

Topic	Putting the Spotlight on Underserved AAPI Populations in Higher Education	Two Universities, One Goal: Developing Partnerships to Foster Leadership and Mentoring Success for AAPI/AAPI Students	"Taking it Personally": Positioning Counter Narratives in Higher Education	How Student Support Services Encourage AAPI Student Leadership Development on College Campuses	APAs in the World of Advancement?
Description	In this session, presenters will provide an overview of recent research on underserved populations within the AAPI community, including undocumented AAPIs, Pacific Islanders, Southeast Asian Americans, and low-income AAPIs. The session will conclude with a discussion among the presenters and audience about researching underserved AAPIs.	Two universities join to share stories of success in fostering community, faculty, and student partnerships through two distinct programs. One program, Asian Pacific LEAD Academy at Arizona State University, represents a longstanding grass roots effort that has evolved into a summer leadership experience for AAPI high school students. The other, AAPI MAPS at California State University, Long Beach, represents a pilot program focused on mentoring and supporting students through campus organizations. Presenters will discuss issues of sustainability, needs of changing demographics, and strategies utilized for assembling the broader AAPI/APIA student community at two universities focused on one larger mission.	Asian American and Pacific Islander women are often relegated to the margins in higher education. By applying a counter narratives approach, the presenter provides useful tools for faculty, staff, and administration of color to build capacity in order to critically reflect and gauge the various leadership roles we have in serving students.	The presenter will share findings from a research study to help us understand how student support services on college campuses encourage AAPI student leadership development. Twenty-four AAPI college students who were current leaders within extracurricular organizations were interviewed. The interviews explored the experiences of AAPI student leaders and the student support services on the campuses that they perceived as enabling their leadership development.	Join a diverse group of Advancement professionals as they share their career paths in the dynamic world of Communications and Alumni and Donor Relations. APA's are underrepresented in Advancement but there are many opportunities for growth in this expanding field.

Topic	Becoming and Being an API Scholar	AANAPISI Voices: Learning from our Students	English Language Learners as the "Others": Rise of Virtual Identities	AAPI Resource Project: An Overview and Interactive Discussion of a School- Community Initiative	Our Stories, Your Future – An informal dialog with College Presidents
Description	In this session, panelists will discuss their trajectories as AAPI scholars. Specifically, they will share their reasons for becoming AAPI educational researchers, salient challenges that they have faced as AAPI scholars, and the value of research in informing higher education policy and practice. The session will conclude with a Q&A with the audience.	This session is a video presentation by Asian American and Native American Pacific Islander Serving Institutions (AANAPISI) featuring interviews of our students, narrating the experiences of their journey in accessing higher education through various grant implemented programs in selected AANAPISI Western Regional campuses.	There exists a policy of “linguistic containment” in postsecondary education that marginalizes the status of English language learners (ELLs), making them invisible and marking them as the “others.” But within virtual space, they have the freedom and opportunity to recreate and redefine their identities. This presentation examines the relationship between ELLs’ institutional label of “remedial students” and their virtual identities.	Over the past year, members of the National Pacific Islander Educator Network - Northern California Chapter (NPIEN NCC) conducted extensive searches for program and contact information about Asian American and Pacific Islander (AAPI) resources from various sectors based on referrals, direct contact, and Internet searches. We then sorted the data by sectors: education; health; legal; and immigration and will post our work on the NPIEN website. The project is still in process; however, we believe that the results thus far will provide a tremendous ‘jumpstart’ to AAPI students and families, particularly as they pursue their educational journey from K-12 through post secondary studies.	Panelist will share their insights, steps, and knowledge on advancing towards leadership in higher education. This session will include small roundtable discussions with one president at a time. This is your time to ask that question you have always wanted to ask a CEO!
